

Accu-Tech, Inc. Announces Acquisition of Third Vision Machine

Monday January 8, 9:14 am ET

The Purchase of Another Mycrona Blueline Signum Marks The Third Vision Machine Owned.

STERLING HEIGHTS, Jan. 8 – Accu-Tech, Inc. (www.accutechmeasurement.com) an ISO certified, third-party measurement company, today announced that it has acquired its third vision machine in its efforts to meet the growing demand of vision work in their facilities.

This is the third machine the company has acquired in a little over a years time, proving that Accu-Tech, Inc. has found a unique niche in a growing service market. Their services have earmarked a definite turning point in the company's growing stride to diversify its services across several different industries.

Images of the machine will be readily available on the website once the machine is received and up and running. Accu-Tech, Inc. is currently working on entering the medical industry.

About Accu-Tech, Inc.

Accu-Tech, Inc.'s primary objective in business is to provide its customers with the most professional, easy to follow solutions for third-party metrology services. With a focus on the customer's needs, they are able to bring fourth solutions that helps aide to the growth in business. While maximizing their resources to further enhance the business, they will continually improve the level of measurement service for our customers.

They have been in the third-party inspection service for the automotive and aeronautical industries for over ten years. Expanding their business to the medical industry with the purchase of Mycrona Vision Systems has vastly improved the capabilities of measurement. Our inspectors have well over fifty years of combined experience as special machine builders, model and tool builders, fixture builders, and most importantly CMM inspectors.

Source: Accu-Tech, Inc.